THROUGH: Assistant Director for Research and Reports

THROUGH: Chief, Economic Research, ORR

FROM: Deputy Chief, Industrial Division, ORR

SUBJECT: Review of First Draft of Training Aid, Intelligence
Research Facilities and Techniques, Part B

1. Part B, Research Planning could be made more useful to prospective students if less attention were given to charters and directives and more effort were devoted to other aspects of research planning. The planning section might well strive to show that since intelligence research is coupled to intelligence problems, planning for a project should start with the definition and delineation of the problem. From there the discussion could proceed to the establishment of the scope of the project, a preliminary survey of the kind and amount of evidence available, the choice of an overall methodology, and in general the design of a program to carry out the project in the allotted time.

2. Detailed comments on Part B are attached.
